WHAT IS ZIKA

Zika is a virus mainly spread by mosquitoes. Zika can be sexually transmitted by someone who has been to areas with Zika. Zika can be passed from a pregnant woman to her unborn baby, which can cause miscarriage, stillbirth and severe birth defects. There is no specific medicine or vaccine for the Zika virus.

ZIKA CAN BE PREVENTED

Use an insect repellent registered with the EPA. Wear long sleeve Shirts and pants when possible. Treat clothes with Permethrin. Using condoms or refraining from sexual activity can reduce the risk of transmitting Zika. Talk to your doctor about Zika. Use mosquito netting over strollers, cribs and beds when exposed to mosquitoes. Empty standing water around your home. Use water treatment tablets in water you cannot empty.

Kits contain prevention items approved by the CDC
